

Dear Andy,

Over the years, The Ridgefield Playhouse has played host to a variety of musical acts. In recent history, Orleans was one of the most professional and fan-friendly groups that has come through our doors. While the band's impressive on-stage chemistry excited the crowd and made for a memorable performance, their genuine interactions at the meet-and-greet resulted in complimentary phone calls the following day. Watching the band was like watching friends getting on stage to play their old favorite tunes together—it gave the crowd an opportunity to feel more connected to the performance. Orleans is a well-managed and modest act that has clearly mastered the art of putting on concerts. Thirty years and still having fun indeed.

Best,

Allison Stockel
